Houston Chronicle endorses Judge Schneider
Newspaper gives judge high marks for career spent protecting children

The Houston Chronicle – the largest daily newspaper in Texas – endorsed 315th Juvenile District Judge Mike Schneider in a recent editorial that praised the Harris County jurist for his handling of high-profile cases and a career devoted to protecting children.

“I’m proud to have this endorsement,” said Judge Schneider, who is the Republican nominee on the November 7th General Election ballot. “Obviously, the newspaper’s editorial board realizes how important it is to have qualified, committed and passionate judges in our juvenile courts.”

After winning the Republican Primary in March and after the Honorable Kent Ellis opted to retire before the end of his term, Judge Schneider was appointed to preside in the 315th. The Houstonian with deep community roots and much-needed experience as a former civil prosecutor who understands all aspects of the law practiced in juvenile courts is now running for a full four-year term

In its editorial, the Chronicle said: “Recently appointed to this demanding bench by Gov. Rick Perry, Schneider seeks re-election to a four-year term. Schneider has devoted his career to protecting children, both as an assistant Harris County attorney and as general counsel of Houston’s renowned Children’s Assessment Center. In his short time on the bench, Judge Schneider has already handled high-profile cases, and his demonstrated competency recommends his election to a full term.”

The newspaper’s backing is only one of the diverse endorsements received by Judge Schneider. He has also been endorsed by the Houston Police Officers’ Union, POLICE, Inc., the Mexican-American Bar Association of Houston, the Jewish Herald-Voice, the Houston Association of Realtors, the “C” Club, the Pasadena Bar Association and the Houston Realty Breakfast Club. Several local elected officials are also supporting his campaign.

Judge Schneider also recently won the Houston Bar Association’s Judicial Preference Poll. That came after he received the most “qualified” and “well qualified votes” in the HBA Judicial Candidate Qualification Poll during the March Primary.
